Money.

[Baltimore American.]
Money—money—money.
Hustle day and night;
Toil and save and scrimp and shave,
And scheme with all your might.
Pennies grow to dollars
Very soon, we find.
But by and by we have to die
And leave it all behind.

Money—money—money.
Dollars are the prize.
Hundreds cents each represents,
And oft a hundred lies.
Thousands grow to millions.
Just when they grow dear
We go away—the millions stay—
We leave the money here.

Money—money—money.
Hardees up your heart.
Take a chance for the finance—
Steal it—if you're smart.
Friendship, love or duty—
Drop them—money's all.
But later on, when you are gone,
There'll be a tearless pall.

Money—money—money.
Who invented it?
Ghastly joke on honest folk—
Sombre sort of wit.
Dollars—dollars—dollars.
They have this distress:
Their only worth is on this earth—
Shrouds are pocketless.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

County Superintendent G. W. Blatterman
Tells of His Visit to Orangeburg
District No. 21.

ORANGEBURG SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 21.
Here again the trustees have been faithful and fortunate in the selection of two teachers. Mr. S. C. Grimes is Principal and Miss Leila Herbert assistant. Mr. Grimes is a gentleman of very pleasant manners, a fine scholar and a good disciplinarian. Miss Leila Herbert is a young lady of sweet, pleasant address, and has charge of the primary classes. Her room is packed full, and all seemed pleasant and happy, on excellent terms with their teacher. The school differs from many schools in the county, in that the attendance was highly satisfactory. Mr. Grimes teaches the advanced classes and they show by their recitations the result from having a first-class teacher.

The trustees are Cornelius Coryell, A. C. Parker and J. R. Shipley, and they have been faithful.

There has been a deal of foolish controversy about the terms of office of the trustees. Dr. Hord was appointed June, 1888, in place of D. A. Cooper, who resigned. Cooper's term would have expired under the new law June, 1901. Doctor resigned in 1899 and I appointed Neville Orridge in his place. Mr. Bullock and Thos. Dickson were elected in 1898, but as only one trustee could be elected lawfully, Mr. Dickson was declared the trustee. Then Mr. Bullock obtained an appointment, but that was no good because the board was full, having three trustees already, and the appointment was null. I have high hopes of Mr. Parker, who will, I think, make a most excellent trustee.

The district has a good school house with two rooms, situated in a large lot, affording fine play ground. They have a fine cistern, conveniently situated, and good outbuildings. The people of Orangeburg know how to appreciate the value and importance of a good school and it will tell, in the future, for they can give nothing to their children that equals, in value, a good education.

I next visited colored school No. 112, in Orangeburg. This is a large district, extending north and south from Orangeburg to the Ohio river. It is rather a tame school, taught in a church with nearly all the windows lighted out. The teacher is Miss Mary Dill, and she is very competent and does her best. I learn lately that they have erected a new school house, which I hope to see next session.

Having completed these visits I found the sun declining in the West and I left for home.

G. W. BLATTERMAN, Supt.

Senator Hansbrough's Jingle.

[Washington Times.]
Senator Hansbrough came into the Republican cloakroom at the Senate the other day when Senator Jones, of Arkansas, was speaking at length on the Subsidy bill. "That reminds me of a little gimerack that I have composed, or plagiarized from some one," he said. "It runs as follows: 'There was a young lady of Arkansas
Who could saw more wood than her maw could saw;
She could sing a little ink,
And drink a little drink,
And chaw more terbacker than her paw could chaw.'

The groundhog, it seems, made no account of the Case case when he settled the weather case.

The onion is eliminated from the diet of conductors on the Chicago City Railway. So says an order issued by General Manager McCulloch, which reads: "Any conductor in whose breath is detected the odor of onions while on duty will be taken from his car and suspended or discharged. Employees of the Chicago City Railway company must not offend the public in such manner."—Exchange.

During a funny turn on the stage at the Walnut Street Theater, Cincinnati, one night a man in the balcony leaned over the railing convulsed with laughter. During an extraordinary burst of hilarity his false teeth flew from his mouth and fell in the lap of a lady who was sitting in the parquet. Those near looked up and saw the toothless man waving frantically to the lady to pick up his teeth. This caused a general laugh at his expense. The teeth were returned by an usher.—Exchange.

Horse radish sauce is one of the best relishes to serve with beef. There are several different methods of making this sauce, most of them being excellent. One sauce is made thus: Take two table-spoonsful of freshly grated horse radish, moisten it with a little vinegar and add one heaping tea-spoonful of sugar, a scant teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of dry mustard. Mix these well together, and just before serving stir in three tablespoonfuls of whipped cream that has been well drained.

New York's Slavery.

When New York city owned a slave ship is told in an article in Pearson's Magazine. The greatest impetus was given to the slave trade by the act of parliament of 1684, which legalized slavery in the North American colonies. This does not mean that slavery was unknown in what is now the United States before that time, because as early as 1620 a Dutch man-of-war landed and sold 20 African negroes at Jamestown, Va.

In 1626 the West India company imported slaves from the West Indies to New York city, then New Amsterdam. The city itself owned slaves in a slave ship, advanced money for its fitting out and shared in the profits of its voyages. This recognition and encouragement may account for the astounding fact that in 1750 slaves formed one-sixth of the entire population of New York. The general prevalence of slavery is shown by the fact that at this time there were 67 slaves in New York's small suburb of Brooklyn, and that in London itself there were residence 20,000 slaves.

Slaves were at that time publicly dealt in on the London exchange. No wonder the traffic in human flesh was a recognized commerce, and that in 1771 the English alone sent to Africa 192 ships equipped for the trade and with a carrying capacity of 47,146 slaves per trip.

A Tricky Dog.

Not long ago a very fat spaniel was introduced into the house where a fox terrier had always been the master. The latter was told, however, to behave well to the newcomer and not to bully him. So the two seemed fairly friendly and in the end got in the habit of taking short rambles together.

However, the fox terrier was evidently of a thoughtful disposition and on one occasion came across a bank, or wall, which was easy enough to leap off, but there was greater difficulty in returning. The fox terrier sprang down the bank and enticed his heavy companion to follow, with the result that the latter could not get back, while the former, by reason of his greater activity, was easily able to do.

Now the terrier saw his opportunity, returned home and cruelly left his companion lamenting. Never did the former seem happier or gay than on that day when he had once more the sole run of the house, and he bulked when later on the spaniel had been found assisted up the wall and brought home.

Since then the fox terrier has repeatedly got the spaniel down the same place, with the usual result, and seems to glory in his mischievous act. Whether the "fat dog" will learn to avoid temptation to such a ramble remains to be seen.—Buffalo News.

How "David Harum" Came to Be Written.

An interesting little anecdote is told about how "David Harum" came to be written. It is rather pathetic. It seems that Mr. Wescott, the author, was the kind of man who could do pretty much anything—paint a picture, plan a house or compose a sonata—but he had never made much money, so when he became ill and realized that he might not live long and would leave his family with little or no money he was desperate.

"Write a book," suggested a friend and neighbor to him one day when they were talking over the situation.

"I did make an attempt at it once," answered Mr. Wescott. "I tried a love story, but I couldn't make it go."

"Add a little local color to it," said the first speaker. "Take one of the people about here that you know and work him up—old —, for instance, mentioning a character familiar to them both. 'He'd be first rate.'

"That's a good idea!" exclaimed Mr. Wescott, and the result of this conversation was "David Harum," and yet "David" was never in the story at all as it was first conceived.—Anna Wentworth in Woman's Home Companion.

Belaying His Jaws.

Shark stories, with some reason, are commonly received with incredulity. A well authenticated anecdote, however, is told of Dr. Frederic Hill, an English surgeon of distinction.

A man fell overboard in the Indian ocean and almost into a shark's mouth. Hill, who was standing close to the rail, grabbed a belaying pin and without hesitation jumped to save the sailor.

The great brute was just turning on his back to bite, when Hill drove the belaying pin right through both jaws. Both men were got on board again unharmed.

"Perhaps that fellow won't want another toothpick. Has any one got a clean shirt to lend? This was my last," were the only words of the rescuer.

Dr. Johnson once met the village postman trudging along the dusty road on a hot summer afternoon. The postman observed that he had still a mile to walk just to deliver one newspaper. "My goodness," exclaimed the sympathetic doctor. "I'd never go all that distance for such a trifl! Why don't you send it by post?"

HUMOR OF THE HOUR.

"And now, darling, it only remains for you to say when"—

But at this moment the automobile, which had reached the top of the hill, started down the other side with frightful velocity.

The young man hastily applied the brake.

It failed to work.

He shut off the power.

It was too late.

The maddest machine raced down the steep grade.

At the foot of the incline there was a sharp turn to the left.

Here the automobile left the turnpike and ran down the embankment, throwing the young couple out and landing in a big pile of sand.

"Never mind, darling," exclaimed the youth, who, with hat gone, collar loose at one end and coat ripped up the back, was presently engaged in digging sand out of the hysterical maiden's mouth, "this is one time that the course of true love ran smooth, even if it did get a bit of a jolt at the end of the run."

A Different Matter.

Tom—I paid a visit to Miss Sweety's house yesterday and found her old man at home.

Dick—Ha! What did the old bear do—kick you out?

Tom—Oh, no. He was very polite; asked me to call again.

Dick—You don't mean it. Why, he never lets any one call on his daughter.

Tom—I wasn't calling on her. I was trying to collect a bill the old man owes the firm.—Philadelphia Press.

He Knew the Spot.

An amusing anecdote is related of General Sherman, who, as commanding general of the army, visited West Point one June for the graduation exercises. He accompanied the commandant on his Sunday morning tour of inspection of barracks, and on entering a certain room he walked over to the mantelpiece.

Stooping down, he pried up a brick from the middle of the hearth with his sword scabbard and revealed a hollow space about a foot square, in which was nicely packed a considerable quantity of tobacco and other contraband articles.

Meanwhile the cadets occupying the room stood by mutely watching and wondering what sort of man the general was to have been able to discover the only "cellar" of its kind in barracks.

Turning to the commandant, the general remarked:

"I have been wondering if that hole was still there. I made it when I was a cadet and lived in this room."—New York Tribune.

Miss Antique—You ought to get married, Mr. Oldchapp.

Mr. Oldchapp (earnestly)—I have wished many times lately that I had a wife.

Miss Antique (delighted)—Have you, really?

Mr. Oldchapp—Yes. If I had a wife, she'd probably have a sewing machine, and the sewing machine would have an oil can, and I could take it and oil my office chair. It squeaks horribly.—Exchange.

Cutting Watch Glasses.

In the production of common watch glasses the glass is blown into a sphere about a meter in diameter, sufficient material being taken to give the desired thickness, as the case may be. Disks are then cut out from this sphere with the aid of a pair of compasses having a diamond at the extremity of one leg.

There is a knack in detaching the disk after it has been cut. A good workman will, it is said, cut 6,000 glasses in a day.

"Beg pardon," said the rude young man, gathering his features together again, "I simply couldn't suppress that yawn."

"Don't mention it," replied the bright girl. "By the way, that reminds me—I visited the Mammoth cave last summer."—Exchange.

Her Knowledge of Chinese.

A young woman at a watering place one summer made a reputation as a profound linguist in a rather odd manner. She called one day at a Chinese laundry where she had left a shirt waist, but it could not be found, as there was no entry in the book of hieroglyphs corresponding to her pink slip. After a half hour's search the Chinaman found the entry. A mistake had been made, so the entry was crossed out and a new set of hieroglyphs in tiny characters placed below. She was told that the waist would be laundered immediately, and she could get it the next day.

The next day the young woman called for it, and the Chinaman allowed her to take the book. Turning the leaves until she came to one that had an entry crossed out with another in tiny characters under it, she handed it to the Chinaman. "There it is," and, to his surprise, he found it.

"You only lady I know spik Chinese," he said. And the other girls looked upon her with admiration.—Kansas City World.

The Unique Horn of the Unicorn.

The horn of a unicorn was shown at Windsor castle and in 1598 was valued at over £10,000. Lewis Vertomanns, a gentleman of Rome, saw with his own eyes two unicorns presented to the sultan of Mecca by a king of Ethiopia. They were in a park of the temple of Mecca and were not much unlike a colt of 30 months of age. This was in 1503. The animal became extinct about the end of the seventeenth century.

The unicorn is represented in the ruins at Persepolis, and it was adopted by the Persians as the emblem of speed and strength. In the middle ages it was the symbol of purity. The unicorn hated the elephant, and it used to what its horn on a stone before it struck the foe in the abdomen. No family, by the way, should be without one of these horns, the average length of which is four feet. They defend from witchcraft. Thus Torquemada had one always on his writing table. Furthermore, a drinking cup made from one will be a safeguard against poison, as will the ground powder put in drink, and indeed the wells of the palace of St. Mark could not be poisoned in the good old days of adventure because these beneficent horns had been thrown into them. Unicorn's horn was formerly sold by apothecaries at $120 an ounce.—Boston Journal.

Fat Policemen.

"Have you ever noticed that nearly all policemen get fat?" asked a man who keeps his eyes open. "This would seem to disprove the theory that walking in the open air is a means of reducing superfluous weight. I have known new policemen to start on their beats weighing no more than 125 pounds. In six months they would tip the scales at 150 and in a year reach the 200 mark.

It must be the slow sauntering in the open air that does it, for I have noticed that while policemen grow fat the house sergeants, who are confined to the stations, are invariably thin. Those who patrol the streets gain the maximum weight in about three years. The muscles then harden, and despite their apparent burden of flesh the men usually develop great activity. One of the best runners and jumpers I know is a policeman who weighs nearly 300 pounds.—Philadelphia Record.

A Bishop's Retort.

At a dinner party a young man was once talking rather foolishly about Darwin and his books, and he said to the bishop of Winchester (Wilberforce), "My lord, have you read Darwin's last book on the 'Descent of Man?'" "Yes, I have," said the bishop, whereupon the young man continued: "What nonsense it is talking of our being descended from apes! Besides, I can't see the use of such stuff. I can't see what difference it would make to me if my grandfather was an ape."

"No," the bishop replied; "I don't see that it would. But it must have made an amazing difference to your grandfather!"

The young man had no more to say.

THE BILLION BEHEMOTH.

Although the figures are somewhat staggering in their vast volume, there is really no ground for surprise, says the St. Louis Republic, at Wall street's estimate that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan will personally make a profit of over $25,000,000 on his deal to consign fate the great steel industries of this country.

"You must remember that it is a billion-dollar trust which this man is organizing," says the Republic.

"Pause just a moment and try to realize what a billion dollars means in its possibilities of power and vast enrichment for the men who deal in such colossal amounts. Then, when you turn to the $25,000,000 which Mr. Morgan is thought to have cleared at the very outset of the deal, your original feeling of surprise will have vanished. It's a mere bagatelle, this little $25,000,000."

"And, dismissing the original rake-off with a wave of the hand, turn again to a contemplation of the steel 'combine' which represents the consolidation of one billion dollars for monopoly purposes. What is not possible to such a combine? What chance may labor or lesser capital or individual manufacturers possess against this behemoth? What show of fair prices, regulated by the law of supply and demand, will the buyer of this trust's products find in the monopolized markets? These questions are worth while thinking over. The billion-dollar steel trust is so big that it casts an ominous shadow across the face of the entire industrial world."

A Disgrace to America.

[New York Journal.]

Public men are fond of making fools of themselves in many ways and of showing in their true characters. Admiral Sampson, who hereafter must be looked upon as a disgrace to American citizenship and to the American navy, has expressed his feebleness of spirit, pathetically and completely.

Wise legislation demanded by public opinion has at last authorized the promotion in the navy of men from the ranks.

Gunner Morgan, a man as Sampson admits of admirable character, good education, temperate habits and professional ability, applied for promotion.

Admiral Sampson, the unparalleled idiot of public life, vetoes the man's application on the ground, if you please, that he is not "a gentleman."

Admiral Sampson, the most extraordinary sample of two-legged idiot that the world has ever seen, feels that if men should be promoted from the ranks they would "not know how to behave at social parties on board ship."

DIED AT WASHINGTON.

Mayor B. R. Wilson, of Aberdeen. Suddenly Stricken at the National Capital Last Night.

A telegram from Washington City announces the death of Mayor B. R. Wilson, of Aberdeen, at the National Capital last night.

Mr. Wilson left Saturday on the 1:36 train for Washington to visit his son Omar and attend the inauguration. He had just recovered from a serious attack of neuralgia of the face, which had caused intense suffering. It is supposed the trip caused a fresh attack, as he died a few hours after his arrival.

Mr. Wilson was one of Aberdeen's best citizens. He was about sixty years old and is survived by his wife, three sons—Oscar, of Cincinnati, Omar, of Washington, and Martin, of the Vancburg Sun, and four daughters—Mrs. Maud Stephens and Miss Lottie Wilson, of Frankfort, Miss Blanche Wilson and Mrs. Carrie Ellis, of Aberdeen.

The funeral arrangements have not been learned.

Dover News: "The bright leaf tobacco raised by Osborne & McGraw, which took the first premium at the Maysville tobacco fair, is said to have been raised on the same piece of ground that produced a hogheads of tobacco which was awarded the first premium at a tobacco fair in New Orleans over sixty years ago. The tobacco was raised by Uncle Sim Walton, who owned the place at the time, and was prized and shipped by Tabb & Lyon, who owned the two brick warehouses that formerly stood on the river bank. It would seem that Mason County land holds good regardless of time. The land is now a part of the Scott Osborne farm."

The second of the series of Sunday night lectures at St. Patrick's Church by Rev. Father Ennis was well attended last night, and the subject, "The Mortality of the Soul, Free Will and Predestination," was handled in that masterly way characteristic of the speaker, who had the closest attention of the splendid audience throughout the discourse, lasting over an hour. It is useless to say the audience was pleased, as Father Ennis never fails to both please and instruct his hearers.

THE BEE HIVE

Many thanks to all for your kind response to our opening sale in Maysville. We also wish to apologize to those who were unable to get waited on. In order to give those who were not fortunate enough to reach the Bee Hive on Friday and Saturday an equal chance, WE HAVE DECIDED TO CONTINUE OUR "NEVER-TO-BE-FORGOTTEN SALE" ONE MORE WEEK.

We need more room for Spring goods, so we will continue to slaughter prices until our shelves and tables cry out, "We are ready for Spring goods." Ridiculous reductions in all departments, from a paper of pins to a parlor carpet.

PROP'S OF BEE HIVE.

MRS. J. BARBOUR RUSSELL.

"Death lies on her like an untimely frost upon the sweetest flower of all the field."

"The air is full of farewells to the dying and mourning for the dead."

Mrs. Pattie (Calvert) Russell, wife of Mr. J. Barbour Russell, died Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the family residence on East Third street.

While the friends of this good woman were in a measure prepared for the sad announcement, yet so suddenly was she summoned, taken in the very beauty and joy of young wifehood, that it is hard for the loved ones to realize their grievous loss in all its fullness.

Mrs. Russell was stricken with uraemic convulsions last Wednesday evening about 7:30 o'clock and never regained consciousness. Medical skill was exerted to its fullest and every effort put forth to stay the hand of death, but to no avail. The insidious disease had stealthily done its deadly work, and from the very moment she was stricken there was but slight hope of her recovery. But, peacefully the end came, as in a sleep, and her gentle spirit passed out into the glories of eternity.

Mrs. Russell was a daughter of the late Thomas Calvert of Lewisburg, and would have been twenty-nine years old on the 26th of this month. She is survived by her husband and by three sisters, Mrs. R. A. Carr, Mrs. Thomas Luttrell and Mrs. W. R. Key. Much of her life was spent in this city, and her lovely character, "chaste as the morning dew," had endeared her to a host of friends whose tender sympathy goes out to the stricken family in this dark hour.

The funeral will take place at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the family residence. Mrs. Russell had been a faithful member of the Christian Church several years and the funeral service will be conducted by the minister, Howard T. Cree. The remains will be laid to rest in the Maysville cemetery.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H. "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicine I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a great tonic and invigorator for weak, run-down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. RESIDENCE BURNED.

The Baldwin Home on Jersey Ridge Destroyed by Fire Late Sunday Afternoon. Insured for $600.

The Baldwin dwelling house on Jersey Ridge, belonging to Mrs. Harriet Baldwin of Forest avenue, and occupied by Mr. Wm. Eitel, was destroyed by fire about 6 o'clock p. m. Sunday. It is not known how the flames originated.

Mr. Eitel, assisted by neighbors, succeeded in saving most of his furniture and household goods. He lost, however, about 3,000 pounds of tobacco, which he had bulked in a part of the building.

The building was part brick and part log weatherboarded, and was insured for $600 in the Farmers' Home Mutual of Mason County. Mr. Eitel had no insurance on his tobacco.

NOW require attention, and though a little early, it is not too soon to think of other out-door work that in the near future will have to be done. We want our friends to know that we have recently received large shipments of Farm and Garden Tools, such as Hoes, Rakes, Spades, Shovels, Mattocks, Pitch Forks, Etc.

Also a complete line of Whitewash Brushes and WIRE NETTING in all the various widths. Buying in such vast quantities, we can afford to offer special inducements to the retail trade. We again take pleasure in inviting the farmers' attention to the fact that we are city agents for Hall's celebrated Limestone PLOW.

FRANK OWENS HARDWARE COMPANY

A mammoth production of "Quo Vadis" comes to the opera house to-morrow night. The famous book has been so universally read that the dramatization of it is eagerly welcomed. The version of the play follows the book closely and deals with the subject in a reverent spirit, thereby earning the plaudits, not only of the press and general public, but of the clergy and conservative element. The stage settings are unusually elaborate and present the Roman palaces in a remarkably realistic manner. The scenic effects form a fitting background for some very capable acting. That "All the world loves a lover" was never more conclusively proven than in the case of Vincius and Lygia, whose pretty love story of the play, while sombre, is lighted up by good comedy and a happy termination.

Following is the review of the market sent out by the warehouses:

"We are pleased to report that the past week has been the best in a long while in our burley market."

"Receipts have been light and the offerings of new greatly reduced in consequence."

"Offerings of old tobacco, however, in consequence of the presence of an out-of-town buyer of old goods for his recently established factory, and a greatly strengthened market, were considerably increased."

"The interest chiefly centered on old tobaccos, and all grades, under the strong competition led by the buyer referred to, sold at an advance over the previous week, with perhaps the most uniformly satisfactory prices since last fall."

"Medium to good red fillers and bright trashes and tips were the best sellers, though in fact anything under about 9 cents sold well. The better sorts were not offered freely, but brought an advance over last week."

"Though the new offered was of very poor quality, and there was not the same demand for it as of old, previous prices were fully sustained, growing strongly as the week advanced, some especially good sales being made on Thursday. The demand for the various grades of new continues relatively about the same as heretofore."
